Chemistry Prof Under Investigation

note @17

TLDR class update for students

On Wednesday's lecture (Jan 19), midway through, where he usually does his joke breaks, Dr. Sherman goes on a tangent example and made some comments. Someone reported the comments he made to the department, and now the situation is Watch from 8:26:42 (the clock in the recording) and the next 9 minutes will cover the whole situation, including the context.

Classes will still be in session, and we will have Professor Dake teaching us. He will go over course logistics and any possib 24th.

I believe it was something about POC having a low IQ. Sure would be nice if OP included the information in the post instead of responding in comments.

Not sure if mods allow posting a clip of the lecture, so here's what he said :

"Well I'll give you a fact, black people do poorer on IQ tests than white people. Is that racist? Thats a fact. Is it racist to say it? I dont know. Asians do better than white people on IQ tests, thats a fact. Now you can make judgements from that. Does that mean asians are smarter than white, whites are smarter than blacks? I dont know.

And is it racist to even ask that question? I dont think its racist. But thats just a historical fact, for however many decades - six decades? - thats been a historical fact. You can get into all kinds of reasons for that certainly. "

Reads Zoom Chat: "are you serious?"

"Yeah it is a fact that asians do better than white people on IQ tests and white people do better than black people. That is a fact. What you draw from that - you can get into all kinds of reasons for that. Its just totally environment, its nothing to do with genetics at all....

"Reads Zoom comment mentioning that its racist" I can't see how you can call that fact just saying a fact"

"So it is gray... I think, what's racist and what's not."

Reads Zoom chat "racism is not a cause?"

Responding to zoom "I said that?"

Reads chat again "this isnt the most productive topic for Ochem...."

"Okay we'll move on"

Ambitious_Court4639 • 4y ago

I am one of the CHEM 313 student. I don't know if you are or not. But I have to say you didn't post all of the chat... What you have posted is kind of misleading... Some of the zoom chat is not as you said that the chat is between student and Professor. It's actually the chat between students. The student A posted his chat saying, "are you serious?", which is actually asking another student B in the chat saying "statically? not necessary a cause." Then, the student A replied to B, "To quote you...statistically, racism is not a cause." Professor Sherman said, "I said that?" Few seconds later, the student A said, "no, the student B did." Then, the student B said, "Sorry, I meant to say about the IQ tests stuff, like statistics don't mean cause. Racism overall is horrible to everyone." Then, Professor Sherman said, "Yes, we all agree on that."

Thanks for sharing the transcript. The Piazza post said he was on a tangent about "semantics"? So the word he used as an example, was that "fact"? Or "racist", maybe? Just trying to understand why he even went on the tangent in an Ochem class, in the first place. Surprising to hear this about him, but I want to give him the benefit of the doubt.

Edit: sorry it was answered below; the word he was using as an example was "racist". IMO he should have known better than to delve into such a touchy subject, but it doesn't seem like he was trying to sneak in some racist rhetoric or something things about his motives.

2. With that said, if he has proper sources for his statistics, the things he said were definitely not enough grounds for any sort of prosecution. In fact, I don't think this topic is racist to discuss either. In a sociology, anthropology, history, or even a statistics class, this could be an interesting thing to examine, from different angles as well.

Nevertheless, it's an OChem class, so it's at best cringe and at worst questionable in his character for him to bring up this topic. Is it right to punish him for it? Not really. I don't personally know him nor how he teaches, but maybe there's more about it than I'm aware of.

Y'all gotta take SOCI 302. Several lectures on the history of IQ tests, the nature v nurture debate, statistics, psychology in general and how it was developed by white supremacist racists... used to argue exactly what this prof here is proposing. IQ tests are not really considered legitimate because of their origins. Also Galton invented many of the statistical methods we use today for the eugenics project so racism is ingrained in them.

He is not gonna get fired because although what he said may be out of context and not something you would want to talk about in a wrong conversation he did not state any opinions whatsoever. He stated a statistics and went on to describe what it could mean but didn't state his opinion.

Something similar happened a few years ago:
https://www1.cbn.com/cbnnews/cwn/2018/september/swedish-professor-under-investigation-for-telling-students-men-and-women-are-biologically-different

Tbh, the investigation would probably end after a week or two.
